We at the London Political Summit and Awards UK, commensurate with the people and government of Malawi on the recent Tropical Cyclone Freddy in Chilobwe, Blantyre region of Malawi, which has claimed almost 200 lives, destroyed thousands of homes, and many are rendered homeless.

We are most grateful to Minister of Homeland Security Ken Zikhale Ng'oma who has pledged that he will donate his March salary to survivors of the mudslide caused by Tropical Cyclone Freddy in Chilobwe, Blantyre.

Zikhale Ng'oma who once lived in Zingwangwa donated the money to the survivors through group village head Chilobwe during a brief presentation ceremony held at Naotcha Primary School where scores of survivors have encamped.

The minister said he decided to donate the salary as a sign of appreciation to the traditional leader and the community for their efforts in rescuing survivors and burying those who died in the disaster.

Zikhale Ng'oma also donated K200 000 to grave diggers who prepared 28 graves in a space of three days.

He also made a K100 000 donation to group village head Chilobwe for his personal use.

In his speech village head Chilobwe thanked the minister for the kind gesture.

The Hon. Minister, was one of London Political Summit and Awards recipients, at the sixth annual summit awards in London.

Yours Faithfully,
